SENIOR CLASS WILL

- I, Marilyn Bernstein, leave my secret hideouts to anyone who can find them. It took me nearly twelve years!
- I, Pamela Black, leave . . . !
- I, Ann Butterfield, leave my "blind dates" to next year's boarding department, which will probably need them.
- I, Anne Cannon, leave my ability to cut hair short (too short) to all long haired boarders aspiring to crew cuts.
- I, Betty Ann Coats, leave open windows to all other fresh-air fiends; my Stan Kenton records to Miss Saxton (she'd love 'em) and the "ski-bug" to all would be snow bunnies.
- I, June Dunbar, leave my knack of getting homework in late to Barbara Greene and to Pat Clancy, my infatuation for "The Forbidden City."
- I, Nancy Fisher, leave my conservative, practical personality and my last week's issue of the "Daily Worker" to Diane Drumb.
- I, Joan Gordon, leave my Sunday afternoon "walks", my favorite seat at the St. Francis Grille, and my man-hating complex to "Ginny" Elwell, in hopes that she will use them to good advantage.
- I, Ellen Huddleson, leave my psychic and hypnotic powers to all potential psychiatrists.
- I, Eleanora Kimball, leave my silent slippers to anyone who is almost as adept at creeping around deserted dormitory halls as I am.
- I, Beverly Kleist, leave my famous last words, "discopooeration", "insigashigation," and "aardvark", to JoAnn McDonald.
- I, Caroline Kuhn, leave my copy of "1001 Alibis for All Occasions", my adroitness for being on time, and ability for staying out of trouble to any frosh who doesn't want to graduate in four years.
- I, Nancy Lee, leave my "attitude" to anyone who wishes it.
- I, Mary Liesman, leave my reliable chauffeur with the four-wheel personality—(jalopy and all), to Audrey Welch.
- I, Diane Reed, leave my expression "I'm lost" in Chem Class, and my ability to send the class running, terrified, from the lab to Cynthia Coats and to Harry, my love of car mechanics.
- I, Lois Roop, leave my extraordinary interest and ability in Latin (plus the ashes of the book) to Carolyn Dietch. (P. S. It blew up the stove.)
- I, Shirley Smullin, leave the "boarding department!?" to any one mentally incapacitated enough to take it, and my sly "expulsion" act to Nancy Gilbert.
- I, Jackie Thomas, leave my passion for shoes to Janet Wineberg and Jackie Howard.
- I, Martha Stearns, leave all my connections with the Delphic, and most of all, "lost copy" to the future Delphic Staff.
- I, Floy Louise Van Groenewald, leave my extroverted personality, loud voice, and "rickie-tickie" to Susan Chandler.

DELPHIC CUP POETRY AWARD WINNER 1951

Lines inspired by "Will O' The Wisp"

Swift through the mesh of the jungle
Where the kiss of the sun can not fall
Weird by the dark-depted water
Echoes the Marsh Nymph's call

Far up the curve of the gray cliff
Beyond the ridge of the hill
She calls and she bids you to follow
Follow and dance to her will

Beguiling, she glides through the deep-wood
A beckoning wraith in flight
A demon with the grace of an angel
A seductive shadow of night

Slim arms stretching out in the sunrise
Witch eyes like burnt amber jewels
Flame hair blazing out in the fleet winds
The touch of her body, stream cool

Take heed, beware of her golden web
She'll bend you to lifeless clay
The magnetic voodoo of her winsome call
Can lure your soul away

Deny the spell of her sensuous form
It's haunting pleasures you'll never know
The tempting perfume of magic lips
Inflame desire, but—don't go!

Death and madness await her embrace
She'll send your soul into hell
She's none but the spawn of the devil
A tale no man lives to tell

She'll leave you to waste in the marshland
And you'll burn for the touch of her hand
With your mind half-crazed you will wander
Her mocking laughter, a brand

You'll wander till flesh won't hold you
Till you plunge in swampy mire
Till the vampires of the night come to claim you
To burn in the devil's fire

Swift through the mesh of the jungle
Where the sun can not fall
Weird by the dark-depted water
Echoes the Marsh Nymph's call
